

Environmental policy

Konzelmann GmbH is aware that its actions must be in harmony with the economy, ecology and social responsibility. We consider corporate social responsibility as an interdisciplinary management task and part of our corporate culture, and we are constantly developing our quality, environmental, occupational safety and social performance in a continuous and autonomous improvement process.

Each individual employee contributes to the achievement of our corporate guidelines with his or her tasks, skills and commitment:

Environmental guidelines:

- The environmental awareness of all employees in the company is continuously refined and actively promoted (training, instruction).
- All new products and processes are assessed and evaluated in advance for their environmental impact. The customer is informed and advised about possible environmental effects of the product.
- Voluntary measures are taken to keep emissions and the volume of waste as low as possible and to avoid unnecessary pollution of the environment. We want to achieve this through the deployment of state-of-the-art technologies.
- Regular environmental audits ensure that environmental requirements are implemented correctly within the company.
- We will ensure that external companies working on our premises apply our environmental standards.
- We strive to involve our suppliers in our environmental efforts.
- The Konzelmann company undertakes to comply with all existing environmental laws and regulations and requirements.
- We drive continuous improvement of environmental protection in the company in order to reduce environmental pollution to an unavoidable level.
- We regularly assess and monitor environmental impacts and inform the public about our environmental protection activities.
- By using the most modern technologies, we aim to minimise the error/reject rate and save energy so as not to waste our valuable resources.
